4 Our PRIORITY AREAS

(Where do we most need to focus together?)

Looking after our people to care for others

We support the health and wellbeing of our people so they feel empowered to care for you and your family. Through a culture of continuous learning and shared values, our people grow and achieve their career aspirations.

Driving innovation and research to improve care

We are constantly improving the quality of our care and discovering new ways to deliver better care through a culture of critical enquiry and clinical and non-clinical research informed by your lived experience. We seek new knowledge that drives the best outcomes for you and your family.

Igniting and inspiring our people through teaching and learning

We ignite and inspire through teaching and learning to build an agile learning organisation that integrates the latest insights with shared knowledge so that we can change the way we deliver care.

Partnerships that connect care

We are connecting care by strengthening our relationships with partners, providers and communities to collectively address preventative healthcare. Uniting the ecosystem so that no matter where you access care, you're supported to understand your health needs and make informed decisions.

Equitable and accessible care

We focus on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities as a priority. As we participate in the current national conversation, we are exploring ways for a more holistic, localised approach to the way we provide services. This will enable equity of healthcare, social justice and a focus on health and wellbeing. We will strive to understand the unique needs of all SALHN communities so that they can receive equitable and accessible care.
